

You told us...

had an improved understanding of the subject areas

found the workshops relevant and useful

would recommend a workshop

found the workshops interesting and engaging reported increased confidence in the topics covered

The practical tasks helped me reflect on my skills and the opportunity to engage with other PGRs meaningfully through group activities.

Careers beyond research: applying your skills outside academia

[The facilitator] has provided many real example of the research that applied the mixed method in context of theory and practice, her knowledge is incredible, I feel much confident and my understanding of nature of mixed method is much better. Thank you!

Research design: Mixed-methods research

[The facilitator] was fantastic in taking us through each step of the process collectively in a clear manner, whilst offering opportunities for questions and comments at every moment. She encouraged us to tell her what we specifically wanted to get out of the session and whether there were any specific areas we wanted to focus on, which was hugely helpful and made it more focused on our needs.

Research methods: Discourse analysis

The session was perfect for an introduction to qualitative research methods. I liked the use of [Mentimeter] for asking questions and that we were encouraged to ask any questions we had.

Research methods: An introduction to qualitative research methods

I liked everything about this workshop. It was well organised, interactive and engaging. As well as [the facilitator] sharing his wisdom and tips for success we had opportunities to reflect on our own position and to share reflections with peers in breakout rooms, specifically set up to enable us to speak to a range of attendees at the workshop. There were many positive take-away messages.

Seven secrets of highly successful research students

The facilitators and fellow PGRs were so open, friendly and supportive. They made me feel like I could express my views in a non-judgemental environment. The open discussions we had were really helpful in making me think wider in relation to my own approach to my PhD and the tools and tips I have come away with are invaluable.

Socio-emotional approach to my doctoral journey

It was very clear and well structured. [The facilitator] took his time in making sure that we all understood before moving on to the next topic.

EndNote desktop as a research tool

I got a much stronger understanding about the meaning of research impact. I liked the opportunities to engage with others within the workshop. Elevator pitch - great idea.

Demonstrating research impact

I found this workshop very helpful and came away with a clear idea of what is required from me for my probationary review.

Milestone preparation: Probationary Review

All the content was very helpful and well presented. The facilitator was receptive to questions. I would highly recommend this workshop. I found it extremely helpful.

Research data management: An introduction

[I liked most] the personalised question and answer process. Also, it was interesting to see ethical conundrums for a variety of research, because even though I didn't realise it - those conundrums could also apply to my research!

Ethics: Values, standards and BU process

Covering the content of the Major Review and having a PGR there who had recently been through the process to give useful feedback on their experiences.

Milestone preparation: Major Review

[I like] the fact it was a flipped classroom and I was able to watch the videos beforehand, meaning I got individualised support on the workshop.

Research philosophy: An introduction